Ingredients must be listed in order of heaviest to least heavy. Ingredients like chocolate chips, for example, have multiple ingredients in themselves, and these sub-ingredients must be listed in parentheses next to the main ingredient. When one of the 8 major food allergens is an ingredient or sub-ingredient, it must be identified by name, either within the ingredient statement OR in a separate statement directly below the ingredient statement. This is called a “contains statement” and must follow the format shown below. The only words that may be used to identify the allergens are the following: Milk, Wheat, Eggs, Peanuts, Tree Nuts (name the specific type of nut), Soybeans, Fish (name the specific species of fish), and Crustacean Shellfish (name the specific species of crustacean).

Allergens* listed in ingredient statement:

Nutrition Labeling Exemption for Small Businesses

If you are a small business, you are most likely not required to have a nutrition facts panel on your label. In order to qualify as a small business that is exempt from including a nutrition facts panel, you must have less than 10 full-time employees and sell less than 10,000 units of product in one year. Also, you may not have claims on the label if a nutrition facts panel is not present. Examples of claims can include: “low fat”, “no added sugar”, “healthy”, “high in fiber”, and etc. In addition, your product would have to meet the definition of these claims.

If you voluntarily include a nutrition facts panel, even though you are not required to have one, it must be correct and include all the required formatting and components. Below is a graphic showing what the Standard Format looks like. All components are required. If you are interested in including a nutrition facts panel, Virginia Tech offers this service, although you may choose to look elsewhere for this service.
